Wife whipping has become a pleasing amusement with that low order of the human species who inchige in bad whisky and worse habita. This city contains more wife-whippers than would fill all the prisons in the State.

An estimable young married lady, eighteen years of age, named Mrs. Julia Adams, accidentally shot herself on yeste day while examining a revolver. She was only married a few morths. Her husband, Mr. Silas N. Adams, the well-known baggage master of the St. Lunis and Alton Radroad, was standing by the garden fence at the time of the accident, and immediately rendered every assistance by procuring the best medical aid, but the poor girl died in three hours from the loss of blood, the shot having passed through her abdomen and escaping through the spinal column.

OUR CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.

eculiar Personal Locomotion-A Lady Abolitionis

Carcago, Ang. 29, 1865.

On visiting Chicago the first thing that attracts a stranger, next to its dirty streets, well dressed rowdies, and fashionable griesctres (for Chicago has its grisettes as well as Paris), is the intense rapidity of personal locomotion. Everybody is hurrying hither and thither as if Death were chashing them to the grave. The men especially are nervously strutting about, with cost buttoned up tightly even on the hottest day. It seems as if these human ants were afraid to unloose their garments for tear the warm cun would penetrate their sordid hearts. This, however, is not true of your gennine "Western man," who has usually a loose, careless way of displaying not only his person but his money. As to his rapidity of locomotion, it is as characteristic as that of your madulterated down-east Yankee, and only lacking in the general personnel in that want of sharp, cauning look which characterizes the latter, and says "money, a fashionalle pew in a fashionalle avenne," but "money, money! money!" is allows the latter and a nine house, on a fashionalle avenne, "tin "money money! money!" is allows the latter and ways despited upon the numitiakable thystoge.

becessary to appease the palate of the brain.)
While thus standing, you can see anylety depicted on every countenance. "Wonder how long that bridge is going to be coming round," ory a thousand voices inwardly; and, when the creat structure does swing to its place, there is a rush and jump and a jam, each striving to distance his competitor. Indeed, long before the bridge adjusts itself you find adventurous creatures hanging on to the railings, and, jumping on the wooden cross way, commence their pergrinations while the structure upon which they stand is still swinging. As the bridge commences to swing crowds invariably jump on that they may be at the other end and ready to step on their mother earth the very moment an opportunity offers itself. The wonder is that there are no deaths by drowning in this way, for the pedestrians, eager in their lastly flight, seem to rush into the very abyas of the deep. While perambulating the streets there is the same constant rustle and bustle, the same hurrying one way or the other. If a gentleman from the rust districts happens to be emjoying binnelf in gazing through the windows of some gandy store, at pictures or other altractions, the first thing that astonishes him will be a sudden avalanche of human nature bearing down upon him like mighty waves bearing straws upon their current. Before he can recover himself he is thirty, fity, or a hundred feet from his late point of observation. Such is one style of walking and taking the world easy in this mighty metropolis in the Northweet.

A LANY ABOUTIONIST. Ham. She rarely if ever troubles herself about the progress or education of the "poor white trash," as that is not popular. In theatrical parlance such a subject wouldn't draw a full house. Over a pair of keen, piercing eves is set a golden pair of spectacles, which contrast favorably with sallow, sunken cheeks, which once were the prettiest of all colors for woman-t beauty—blonde. In her youth she was full of vivacity, but now she seems to be full of the d—I in asserting the precepts and practices of her vicious doctruses, there is a heavy energy, which seems to say, "I have carried my point: I sm now only pounding it in." Fortunately for the human race, and thanks to the wise but my iterious workings of Providence, Susan has never become a mother and was never married. It saves some unfortunate son of Adam from having on hand a constant supply of the concentrated essence of gall and vinegar, and put an end to a race conspicuous tor their moral and mental infirmities. When a woman so far forrets the high estate to which the Almight, called her as to stoop down to the fithy and degrading fields where miscegenation floods the public thoroughfaires with its nanseating, repulsive, and ioathing practices, it is mock modesty to play the part of a chivalric knight.

Should they be arraigned for treason neither of them possess enough to enable him to retait the services of even a Tombs lawer for his defense. Those who know the character and habits of the two men will need no argument to convince them of this. General Magrider is an improvident and impulsive man, whose liberal and profuse expenditures were never restrained by any thought for the future. He is indebted to the generosity of friends for the scant means by which he hopes, as a refugee in a toreign land, to be able to escapelapersecution. General Smith, on the other hand, is a geutleman of most exemplary life and spotless character. A plous and humble member of the Episcopal Church, in which it was his highest ambition to be permitted to take holy orders on the termination of the war, his orderly habits and scrupplous adherence to a conscientions discharge of his dutie, assure all reasoning men of the ground his reach, had be been so inclined.

I never personally knew either of these gentlemen, or erjoyed any favor at their hands. MATOR-GENERAL HOWARD'S SPEECH.

On Sonday evening last Major-General O. O. Howard, Chief of the American Freedment Bureau Department, addressed a very large audience at one of our public halls, on the objects, workings, and destiny of the bureau. The General was introduced by the Rev Mr. J. R. Shipherd, Secretary of the Northwestern Freedmen's Bureau. As is usually the case with a 'minister of the Gospel of Crist' who preaches politics for a living and devotes himself to temporal rather than apiritual affairs, he was violently bitter and bigoted against those who differed with him as to the status and qualifications of the colored people. Of course Rev. Shipherd is making a good living out of the proceeds realized in his present position, and it is nothing more than untural that he should make a sanguinary costest for so fat and luccious a sinecure. His remarks called forth vigorous applause, and if the clapping of kauda and the stamping of feet be any evidence of creatorical shilty, Mr. S. is a second Demosthenes, a fact, however, which has a very limited circulation. The speech of General Howard contained no lescope of History.

The speech of Geogral Howard contained no great original truths nuless it be one which certainly astonished his appreciative andience with its unique originality, to the effect that "the State of New York has as much right to allow the negro to vote as it has to allow an Irishman to vote, or any body else." This will certainly electrify the executive and administrative departments of that State to think that, amidst all the "tyranty and oppression" under which we have been laboring the last four years, the States have yet some reserved rights, and it will be uo less novel to the countrymen of Sheridan, Grattan, Moore, and O'Connell to know that the Empire State can yet stretch out its hands to confer sacred rights on the unfortunate exilica. Undoubtedly the speech will be extensive. It circulated throughout that portion of the press of the country especialty interested in the workings of the Freedmen's Bureau.

POLITICAL GOSSIP. A prechasion exists in regard to the counterfeiting of the national issues of notes, and we have taken pains to inform ourselves, through the proper officers of the Treasury, to the cud that the jubic may be correctly informed of the The political periedmen's Bareau.

The political perius of this State are four in number, the Union and the Democratic parties, the radical and the peace parties. Therpeace men are off-hoots from the Democratic party, and the radicals are off-hoots from the Union party, or, more properly speaking, the Union men having become disgusted with the extreme views of the radicals, they have cut themselves loose, and form a very powerful political organization. But when it comes to a test vote the radicals vote with the Union party and the peace men vote with the Democratic party. But of the radicals vote with the Union party and the peace men vote with the Democratic party. But of the radicals vote with the Union party and the peace men vote with the Democratic party. But of the radicals vote with the Union party and the presence of the runing parties are fig ring for the soldier's vote. The bows in blue, having had experience, are not yet convinced of the "universal enff age" mania, and to convince them is the great work of the oppositionist. All over the West, which is deeply saturated with a military spirit, a lively fight is going ou, and the contest looks as if it were doubtful. If the true, gennine Democracy go into the field well armed and equipped they will make a good and, perhaps, successful fight. All chemists and sclentific men agree, I helieve, that everything we eat, drink, or take as medicine has more or less of poison in it, and hence it is argued with reason that everything we lich God has given us should be used in moteration, at proper times and places, as a little poison is absolutely necessary, in the economy of nature, for a wholesome digestion.

Dector Benjamin Rush, the Father of American Medicine, in his lectures before the Franklin Institute, l'hiladelphia, "On the Uses and Abnres of Tobacco," has said that, while tobacco is is a rank poison to some constitutions, it is healthful to othere, and interaces many eminent examples in Europe, and in America also, where literary and sclentific men and statesmen have insured good bodily health and mental improvement, concentration of ideas and thought, by the temperatures of tobacco, especially insured; good bodily the soft and mental improvement, can arguing therefrom that the Creator has given us the weed, not to be abused, but to be paed in moderation.

But, although Dr. Rush controlled the yellow fever, and won a world wide fame, he did not live in the present fast age of steamboats, railroads, telegraphs, and "fast young men," and probably did not dream of the progress that would be made in the nincteeth contry, not all in physics, but in mechanics, morality, and refinement.

DR. ADONIS. The Carrer of Cortinas—Some Schaps from History.—To insure the success of a cause, it is often essential to make its advocates heroes. Mankind in general is not enficiently abstract and theoretical to follow a grand idea, without observing who and what its disciples arc. It demands something personal for its admiration, the concrete and represensative, and not eimply the abstract and theoretic. In the grand effort of restless and ambitions intrinsurs to embred our now happy country with Stexico and with Europe, this philosophical fact has not been forgotten; but unfortunately, there never was less ground for bero-worship than among the rival leaders of the Mexican factions.

Prominent among these chieftains is Cortinas. stage coach, or in a passenger car.

A little later he again crossed the Rio Grande at the head of his gang, killed a few of the people of Brownsville, and committed other ontrages nyon life and property. It is true that he chained to be seeking revenge for wrongs done from running his blockade.

Meanwhile, Major Heintzelman had been dispatched by Twiggs to Brownsville, with Capt. Steneman's company of the 2d cavalry, which, on arriving, fought Cortinas in two sharp combats between Brownsville and Ringgold Barracks, diving him across the river, and away from American soil. In a steatby, hrizand way, however, the vindictive Cortinas continued to cross into our territory, and plundered and murdered when he could. Nor was it our population alone which he honored with his attentions; he infested both aides of the Rio Grande, waviaid and shot travelers, followed the river, captured boats, and devastated property, private and public. Accordingly, when Colonel R. E. Lee moved against him in the following spring (of 1890), he found Garcia, the Mexican commander at Statamoras, quite as ready as Ilmself to hunt down this pest of the country like a-mad dog. The Mexicans in this same State of Tamaulipas, of which he is now a Briggolier-General, and, after a sharp conflict, dispersed his boand, falling to capture Cortinas, indeed, but taking some of his leaders, whem they shot or hung. If anybody finds the distance of six years leading enchantment to the career of Cortinas, we advise him to reduce that distance by a glance through the telescope of History. men will not stop this flagrant violation by enfercing the rule, then young Lieutenants and fast civilians ought to form Loia Montez clubs, so that, when requested not to smoke in the care, they can answer defiantly, as Loia once did the conductor: "You see I do smoke!"

The essence of true gentility is to duly regard the feelings of others on all occasions, and no rentleman needs any word of cantion on this surject; but there are those who wear gentleman's clothes, cat voracionaly, and hlow their noses vociferously at the public table, and smoke in the passenger cars, to whom it is as useless to preach reformation and good manners, as it is to talk politics to a horse or a mule; the answer will still be 'heigh!' "neigh!" Nothing but compulsion, as in military discipline, will effect the desired reform.

In conclusion, I can only say, in the language

In many cases, no doubt, the successful candidate would be some poor boy of worth and merit, but with inadequate means to pay his other necessary expenses. I would therefore also suggest that the County Courts in each clistrict might make an appropriation to defray these expenses, which would be a small matter to them, but a great blessing to the boy, and thus make him a blessing to the state; especially would this be the case in our mountain districts where talent and genina seem so often to spring spentaneously, and need but the fostering care of the State for its highest development.

Though not required by the act of the Legislature, yet it is our purpose, so soou as the means of the Institution will justify, to furnish net only twition but board free to such young men, and thus cheapen as far as we can this matter of education and make it accessible to the masses.

Ilnffman sight of Major-General Rouseeau, who it was was called to the chair, and Vene P. Armstron announced in yesterday's Herald would arrive appointed Secretary, when the following res in the city during the day. The General traveled without other insignia of the soldier than the martial tread and bearing of his stalwart figure, and few of the numbers who had gathered to greet him recognized the 'Hero of Perryville' in his habiliments of peace. He is a stranger to the people of New York only in person. His deeds are remembered, and his ame and fame are bright in their memories. He is remembered not less for his brilliant schievement at Perryville and his gallant conduct at Shiloh and Stone river than for his dignified and patriotic course in 1861-for his firm with them. and nacompromising warfare against Kentucky neutrality in 1961 and Kentucky slavery in 1865 His late bold and maniy race for Congress is Kentucky, in which his personal popularity thus disposes of the famous apple-tree under vercame a heavy party majority against him, which General Lee signed his capitulation:

The old adage of "Error traveling in sevenleagued boots, and Truth never being able to overtask him," is strikingly exemplified in the published announcement that a set of jewelry is to be presented to Mrs. Grant, manufactured from the Identical apple-tree under which Gens.
Grant and Lee settled the final terms of entrender at Appomattox Court-House. These Generals met but twice at that place—first in the house of Mr. Willey McLean, at a quarter past two o'clock on the forenoon of April 3, where the final terms of surrender were agreed upon
and reduced to writing and signed, before either of the "high contracting powers" emerged from the building; and secondly, by previous agreement, at ten o'clock on the forenoon of April 10, in an open field on the south side of the ravine separating the two armies. The writes of this witnessed both interviews and desires to

held no interview of any character whatevel under or near to any apple-tree, as all will tee. which General Lee signed his capitulation: ie still fresh in the minds of the people as the most encouraging sign of returning reason on the part of 'our deluded brethren,' and of affording good reason to hope that they are henceforth going to choose similarly sterling "Many of our most distinguished citizens led upon the General yesterday. At an early hour he was visited and welcomed to the city by W. M. Evarts, Esq., who remained with him during the greater part of the morning. Hon. John H. Clifford, Attorney-General of Massasetts, and others, also paid their respects. "In the afternoon the General visited the Park, and was as much pleased as astonished at the prodigality with which New Yorkers have enriched their favorite public work. "General Rousseau is to leave the city this orning by the Albany boat. He is returning to Tennessee to formally relinquish his command of the District of Nashville, preliminary to his return to civil life and political campaigns.

The Herald's Richmond correspondent says Gen. Lee has within a few days practically set about the task of writing a history of the war. The forthcoming work will be written from a rebel point, and will be an exceedingly valuable contribution to the historical literature of the conntry. Lee is living in great quiet on an obserier farm, the property of a friend, in Cumberland country, Virginia. His sons with slight aid have raised a magnificent crop of corn on the White House farm.

A correspondent of the Herald gives some interesting statements in regard to the proposed emigration to the rich and magnificent empire of Brazil. About twenty agents from various Schilment States sailed for Rio Janeiro on the 12th uit, to make an examination of the dominions, and returned and report on the advantages for the settlement of Southerners. Our correspondent estimates that anyward of 5,000 of our Southern coventry men are now ready to emigrate thither, and should the reports of these prove favorable, he gives it as his opinion that this number will be increased. O. 8. Bedler testified that he had served in he 16th Illinois cavalry, and was a prisoner at andersonville from the 8th of March till September, 1864; he thought Captain Wertz assumed command about the 1st of April; on one occasion Wertz came into a stockade, when a ripple on crutches approached him and asked terruission to go outside; the request was remard; the cripple said he would rather be dead, when Wertz told a sentinel: "If that man don't go back, shoot him;" the cripple did not go back, and the sentry fired upon him; Wertz was accard to say that he was killing m re Yankees were shot.

Jas. H Davidson testified he was a member prisoner and sent to Andersonville. He says he was the driver of the dead wagon, and at times had upward of thirty men in his wagon, and when returning to the camp would bring rations and wood back in the same wagon. He also saw a prisoner who had washed some clothes, and while hanging them up to dry one of the pieces blew over the dead line, and when the prisoner reached over to get it was fired upon and shot through the breast. He also saw men starved to death. Witness had never eeen Wertz shoot but one man. The gravediggers were Union prisoners. Graves were dug about two feet six inches deep.

Col. Whiting, formerly of the Confederate service, testified to the signatures of Captain Wertz and General Winder on the consolidated report. The report is as follows:
